SYNOPSIS

Here's where we ought to tell you what it's all about. For those in a hurry we have quoted from the titles:

A Little of "This" and "That" and "These,"
With a few of "Them" and "Those,"
Are chased about by some "Hims" and "Shes";
And that's how our story goes!

Julian Eltinge as Clifford Townsend, is a red-blooded adventure-loving young American who has just finished college and decides to engage in one of those opera bouffe revolutions which are constantly taking place in queer little countries throughout the world; this one is on "The Isle of Love." Eunice (Alma Francis) is the girl he leaves behind. Lydia Knott appears as Clifford Townsend's mother.

Townsend finds the revolution on "The Isle of Love" quite interesting. There seems to be an unusual supply of beautiful bathing girls and the king has fallen from grace because of his disposition to let the ship of state sink while he plays around on the beaches. Townsend sees a good job for the right kind of a king and summons an old classmate, Jacques Rudanyi (Rodolph Valentino) to take the throne, believing Jacques' dashing style well suited to win the admiration of the populace. Arriving at "The Isle of Love" Rudanyi renews an old acquaintanceship with Vanette, strikingly beautiful, who had previously stirred in him the Grand Passion.

Townsend, Jacques and Vanette plot to seize the throne, fighting the opposition of an intriguing Prince and Duke who have the same idea. Townsend masquerades as a woman and "vamps" the Prince but all plans miscarry when the pseudo-woman is obliged to thrash the Prince to "protect her honor." The trio are forced to flee for their lives. Townsend is caught and only escapes being shot by a firing squad when Jacques arrives in the nick of time with his airplane. All reach the United States in safety. Townsend is reunited to "the girl he left behind" and Jacques and Vanette find happiness.
